Nine years ago, Michelle Grant was at rock bottom--until a chance meeting with a stranger gave her hope...and her first delicious taste of passion. Now a successful businesswoman, Michelle still remembers the man she knew only as B.J.. And when fate brings them together again, the feelings she had for him come rushing back. But as soon as Brad Jamison speaks, Michelle realizes that the caring man she once knew is now a hardened businessman without warmth or tenderness, and he doesn't remember her...

Brad has heard the rumors that Michelle's success may be due more to her looks than her brain--but he doesn't believe them. He knows how hard it can be for a black woman to get ahead in business. Indeed, when Brad finally meets Michelle, her head for business impressed him--while her almond skin and smooth curves send his mind reeling. She seems so sweet...even familiar. But if he discovers the shared past that only she remembers, will it tear them apart forever?

Michelle Grant has succeeded in the Dallas real-estate business on much more than her good looks, youth, and seductive outfits. Even with her financial success, Michelle neither has nor wishes to have a serious relationship. She lives with her wheelchair-bound older brother, Nick, who is overprotective and emotionally demanding. When Michelle finally meets her new client, Brad Jamison, she is left speechless. Michelle remembers him kindly from her past because he offered her compassion during a rough time in her life. Now, nine years later, his good looks and great fortune make him all the more attractive, but then they start furiously bidding against one another for a piece of real estate. Each soon must decide whether the relationship is worth more than the property or whether being apart will ease their pain and resolve their impasse. Ray has written another entertaining romance, which includes the added bonuses of a short story and an excerpt from her upcoming novel. Lillian Lewis
