Design and Technology in the Primary School: Case Studies for Teachers (Subjects in the Primary School) By Hind Makiya, Margaret Rogers

The inclusion of technology among the National Curriculum foundation subjects is an exciting , but at the same time somewhat daunting challenge for primary teachers. This series of case studies shows how real teachers across the primary age range have put design and technology into practice as a focus for their topic work. Through these examples Margaret Rogers and Hind Makiya show what is meant by design and technology in the primary school and how problem solving activities can be used to fulfil the requirements of the National Curriculum across several subjects. Useful appendices summarize the technology requirements of the National Curriculum and give extra guidance in common areas of difficulty such as the introduction of electricity and the use of electricity and the use of technical lego.

Editorial Review

Review

‘This book will make a very useful contribution, not only for its target UK readership, but for any international readership interested in developing Design and Technology work with children of primary school age.’ - Intl Jnl of Technology & Design Education

‘The book made me want to get into school and try out some technology, because now I think I understand it a little better. That was the main aim of the book.’ - Primary Science Review

‘This book is welcome as it contains a number of descriptions of work carried out by a range of children and their teachers, some of whom appear to little ‘technological’ background.’ - Primary DATA

‘The authors have gone some way to fill a significant gap in the books available to teachers, students and those involved in training. The authors are clearly knowledgeable, experienced and reflective as evidenced in a number of thoughtful asides throughout the book.’ - Primary DATA
