Black Sheep By Susan Hill

A searing family story from one of our most beloved writers.

The village is called Mount of Zeal. It's built in a bowl like an amphitheatre, with the winding gear where the stage would be. The pit lies below. Ted Howker's school is on the edge of Lower Terrace next to the chapel. Upper Terrace -- in a thunderous echo of the Bible so loved by Ted's grandfather -- is Paradise. Ted and his father and his brothers live in Middle. In the beginning: a household of men, all of whom work in the pit. Susan Hill is an exceptional writer at the height of her powers. Every word is precisely right: the descriptions of the village and the pit, the people and the farm are exact and true; the heartbreak is inevitable yet new; and the imagery and imagination take your breath away.

Editorial Review

Review

"Powerful... Poignant, bleak and haunting, this is a small masterpiece" Sunday Mirror "Compulsively readable" Irish Examiner "Hill deploys her not inconsiderable power to weave a haunting story" Daily Mail "Beautifully, even lovingly, told" Scotsman "There is something Hardyesque in the tragic momentum of this story" Guardian
